Collection Overview

Repository:	Archives Center, National Museum of American History
Title:	William L. Bird Holidays on Display Collection
Dates:	1877-2010
Quantity:	6.5 cubic feet, 17 boxes, 1 oversize folder
Abstract:	The collection consists of archival materials assembled by National Museum of American History Curator William Lawrence Bird. The materials were used as background research for the publication of his book Holidays on Display (New York: Princeton Architectural Press, 2007), and as exhibit objects for the exhibit by the same name that opened shortly after the museum's architectural renovation (November 2009-September 2010). The materials include advertising and trade literature, especially for department stores and with emphasis on the display of toys; catalogs; photographs and slides; postcards; parade programs; design drawings; correspondence; stock certificates, and miscellaneous items relating to department stores and their displays, parades and the amusement industry.
Language:	Some materials in German and Italian.

Series 1: Advertisements, 1925, 1954

This series consists of point of purchase pieces (paper cut-outs) created for J.L. Hudson and Marshall Field's department stores. The Hudson Company sponsored a Thanksgiving Day Santa Parade in 1954 that featured several Chrysler Corporation automobiles. The point of purchase ads for automobiles include the Dodge Custom Royal Lancer Convertible, Imperial Newport, Plymouth Belvedere Sport Coupe, Desoto Fireflite Sedan, Chrysler New Yorker St. Regis, as well as a stage coach, space ship, jumping jackstraws, and kiltie band. The Marshall Field's materials contain a child's treasure chest with toys and a company delivery truck.

Series 2: Articles/Newspaper Clippings, 1922, 1936, 1937, 1952 December 20*Box 17, Folder 1*

This series consists primarily of articles from magazines and printouts from the internet about the evolution of the department store, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, how Santa shaped America, Christmas tree histories, and the 2009 United States postal stamp honoring the Thanksgiving Day Parade. Some oversize materials include a National Cash Register Company CPC Special Newspaper (1922) and an insert from the Daily Express (1937) about sightseeing in London.

Series 3: Artwork/Drawings, 1952, 1966

This series consists of original renderings (pencil, ink and water color), transparencies, and copy prints for the Bamberger's Department Store Thanksgiving Day Parade in Newark, New Jersey. Float renderings include Miss Bams, Tex Fletcher, Toyland Trolley, Chef in Large Pot, and an elephant. Also included is documentation from the NBC Promotion Department for the NBC Peacock Float, 1966. A drawing and print of the float, instructions on how to promote the parade and NBC Peacock Float and the breakdown of materials and associated costs are provided.

Series 4: Pins (souvenir), 1901-2009

This series consists of pins from parades and celebrations in the United States. The majority of the pins are for the St. Paul Winter Carnival in St. Paul, Minnesota. The St. Paul Winter Carnival is one of the oldest carnivals in the United States, dating back to 1886. Also included are pins for the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, a souvenir pin from the Hudson-Fulton Celebration (1909), and a pin from a street fair in Wheeling, West Virginia (1901).

Series 5: Certificates, 1976

This series consists of certificates for the Macy Credit Corporation. Also known as a debenture, it is a document that either creates a debt or acknowledges it, and it is a debt without collateral. The certificates were issued to individuals and companies and the samples in the collection are in dollar amounts for one thousand dollars, five thousand dollars, ten thousand dollars, and twenty-five thousand dollars. The Macy Credit Corporation was a wholly owned subsidiary of R.H. Macy & Company, the well-known department store chain based in New York City. For over a century, Macy's held to a tradition of selling to customers on a cash-only basis. Unlike other retailers, there were no installment sales or credit extended to customers. In fact, the company had a well-advertised motto, "No One Is in Debt to Macy's." The certificates are arranged numerically.

Series 6: Correspondence, 1928

This series consists of letters about the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, California and the Portland Rose Festival, Portland, Oregon. The letters describe the shipment of goods and especially the transportation, labor, and decoration of the Glendale Dragon, a float sponsored by the Glendale Chamber of Commerce that was included in the Tournament of Roses Parade, Fiesta de la Rosas in San Jose, California, and the Rose Festival in Portland.

Box 1, Folder 8A	Christmas card (National Nephrosis Foundation, Inc., undated)

Series 7: Department Stores, 1890-2001

This series consists primarily of catalogs documenting goods and services offered as well as the history of the store. Some stores produced guidebooks to their respective cities. For example, Our Trip Through Field's, 1933, chronicles the history of Marshall Field's as well celebrating the Century of Progress International Exposition held in Chicago in 1933. Many of the catalogs or booklets produced by the stores were celebratory of an anniversary, event, or a city. The Selfridge and Company booklet celebrates the decorations for the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1937. Some of the materials are holiday-specific and there are many Christmas-related catalogs such as the Christmas Book, 1940, by John Wanamaker of Philadelphia. Watt & Shand of Lancaster, Pennsylvania produced a Santa's Headquarters board game for children that was made of paper. Four players started at the North Pole and progressed through the board ending at Santa's Headquarter's at the store. The materials are arranged alphabetically by the name of department store.

Also included is Department Store: An Inventory of Primary Sources assembled by the National Museum of History and Technology, Smithsonian Institution, 1974. The Museum was pursuing a retail department store exhibition project and undertook a survey of primary, secondary, and tertiary materials related to the American department store. Rosario Joseph Tosiello wrote a report which included a summary, the names of the department stores contacted, department stores with materials, inventories of archival materials (when applicable), a bibliography, and photocopies of booklets and pamphlets. In addition to the inventory, there is correspondence between Jack Noble of Robinson's and Brooke Hindle, Director, National Museum of History and Technology. The inventory was maintained by Charlie McGovern, curator and then given to William L. Bird, curator, in 2004.

Series 8: Design/Display Companies, 1890-2010

This series is divided into thirty-one subseries and consists primarily of catalogs and product literature for companies that designed, fabricated and installed parade floats and or window displays as well as manufactured and installed amusement rides. Most of the companies are from the United States, but some companies are international. For example, Anton Schwarzkopf (1924--001) a German engineer of amusement rides and founder of the Schwarzkopf Industries company, built numerous rides and large roller coasters for both amusement parks and traveling funfairs.

Messmore & Damon comprises the largest subseries. It was one of the most influential design companies from the 1920s to the 1960s. The company produced a wide variety of parade floats, dioramas for museums, exhibits for expositions, displays for department stores, scenery for films, Broadway and television shows, and exhibits for corporate clients. Most of its parade and department store work featured mechanical devices which animated the animal and human figures involved, pioneering what became known as "animatronics". George Harold Messmore and Joseph Damon formed Messmore & Damon in 1914 and earned a reputation for building amazing displays for world's fairs such as Chicago's 1933 Century of Progress Exposition.

The Eden Musee materials document a New York City amusement place which opened in March of 1884. Founded by a Frenchman, Count Kessler and a New Yorker, Richard G. Hollaman, the Eden featured various acts--fencers, singers, dancers, wax figures, motion picture movies, and flower shows. The Eden Musee filed for bankruptcy in 1915 and eventually moved to Coney Island under the ownership of Sam Gumpertz. Companies that manufactured artificial flowers and papers (foil and crepe) are also represented. Samples of crepe papers made by the The Dennison Manufacturing Company and foil papers by Gasthoff's Display Service, Inc. are found here. The materials are arranged alphabetically by company name.

Series 10: Photographs, 1877-2000

Series 10, Photographs, 1877-2009, is divided into five subseries. The photographs document through black and white and color prints, slides, and transparencies floats in parades, individuals decorating and constructing parade floats and window displays for department stores. The window displays are primarily Christmas-related. The Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, California, better known as the Rose Parade, is well represented.

Subseries 10.1, Parades, 1877-1980s, consists of images that depict floats in parades and individuals decorating and constructing parade floats. The subseries is arranged chronologically and if known, the name of the parade and location are provided.

Subseries 10.2, Window Displays, circa 1930s-2000s, consists of images depicting window displays at department stores as well as items used for displays such as mannequins.

Subseries 10.3, Miscellaneous, 1935-1965 and undated, contains images of Messmore & Damon design work, a series of prints depicting the Cozy Cottage Cloud, a display at Marshall and Field Company and two copies of an image depicting Isabella Coleman, a prominent designer of parade floats.

Subseries 10.4, Slides, 1948-1976, consists of color slides depicting primarily parades. The slides are arranged chronologically and if known, the name of the parade and location are provided.

Subseries 10.5, Lantern Slides, undated, consists of seventeen color lantern slides. The slides are arranged in numerical order and are undated. Most of the slides document gardens, especially flowers, and the process of decorating parade floats.

Series 12: Publications, 1938-1989

Series 12, Publications, 1938-1989, is divided into eighteen subseries.

The materials consist of publications produced by department stores and other businesses and organizations related to parade float design, window displays at department stores, and amusements. Many of the publications are internal department store publications for employees. These include the Fellow Worker (Jordan Marsh Company) The Hudsonian (J.L. Hudson Company), Sparks (R.H. Macy and Company), and Store Chat (Strawbridge and Clothier). These employee publications provided news about the store and employees' accomplishments. Some of the publications contain holiday related information, especially Christmas. Featured are toyland and Santa-related displays and installations and images depicting parades sponsored by the department stores. The materials are arranged alphabetically by the title of the publication. If known, the department store or business name that produced the publication is provided.

There are several childrens souvenir booklets in this series. These books were produced by the department store and were given to visitors. For example, the Jolly Book for Boys and Girls produced by John Wanamaker stores consists of a collection of songs, stories, poems and puzzles for children. The store used the booklet to advertise and market items to children.

Also in this series are the International Correspondence Schools (ICS) booklets. The ICS was an educational institute established in 1891 in Scranton, Pennsylvania that provided correspondence and distance learning courses. Arranged by serial number, the booklets were written by personnel in sales and promotional departments at Marshall Field's; N.W. Ayer and Son, Inc; J.M. Hickerson, Inc.; Schwab and Beatty, Inc. Advertising Agency; JIT Harrison Advertising; Hugo Wagenseil and Associates, The May Company; Security and Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York; Kretschmer Advertising Agency; D'Arcy Advertising Agency; The Bresnick Company, Advertising Agency; faculty at various universities; and International Correspondence Schools staff. Each booklet provided a lesson in a certain area of advertising followed by an examination.
