Death is the end of a living organism's life, technically defined in humans as the permanent termination of brain activity. Death has commonly been considered a sad or unpleasant occasion, due to the affection for the being that has died and the termination of social and familial bonds with the deceased. Fear of death is common and many cultures and religions have the idea of an afterlife. "It's the unknown we fear when we look upon death and darkness, nothing more."

Looking for God in Harry Potter The Pro-Potter Christian Response Harry Potter as a Christian Story? Argument #1: The Potter books illustrate a Christian worldview and fill our human need for stories about the fulfillment to be found in Christ. I don't want to belabor this point, but C.S. Lewis described the life of Christians as a life spent in an enemy occupied country. The magical and secret world inside Muggledom is not cause for concern so much as it is a parallel to celebrate her secret world within our world coincides with rather than contradicts the worldview of Christians.
