The history of Russia - the Old Russian State (Kievan Rus), the Moscow Principality, the Russian Kingdom, the Russian Empire, the USSR, the Russian Federation. Subsequently, the term "Russia" was used to name the East Slavic territories that were not part of the medieval Poland and the Grand Duchy of Lithuania and united by Grand Duchy of Moscow into a single state. The Russian Federation is the historical successor to the previous forms of continuous statehood since 862

Origins, Imperial, Tsar, Russian Revolution and Communism. Romanov Dynasty. Lenin Stalin Communist. The early history of Russia, like those of many countries, is one of migrating peoples and ancient kingdoms. In fact, early Russia was not exactly "Russia," but a collection of cities that gradually coalesced into an empire. In the early part of the ninth century, as part of the same great movement that brought the Danes to England and the Norsemen to Western Europe, a Scandinavian people known as the Varangians crossed the Baltic Sea and landed in Eastern Europe. The history of Russia begins with the histories of the East Slavs. The traditional start-date of specifically Russian history is the establishment of the Rus' state in the north in 862 ruled by Vikings. Staraya Ladoga and Novgorod became the first major cities of the new union of immigrants from Scandinavia with the Slavs and Finno-Ugrians. In 882 Prince Oleg of Novgorod seized Kiev, thereby uniting the northern and southern lands of the Eastern Slavs under one authority. The state adopted The early history of Russia witnessed a collection of cities that gradually coalesced into an empire. In the 9th century, Viking tribes from Scandinavia, known as the Varangians moved southward into European Russia, tracing a path along the main waterway connecting the Baltic and Black Seas. The leader of the Varangians was the legendary warrior Rurik, who led his people in 862 to the city of Novgorod on the Volkhov River. From Novgorod, Rurik's successor Oleg extended the power of the city southward. In 882, he gained control of Kiev, a Slavic city that had arisen along the Dnepr River a... For the first time in history a government controlled all economic activity. As a part of the plan, the government took control of agriculture through the state and collective farms (kolkhozes).
