Kentucky Land Review

All land in Kentucky should follow a pedigree back to a governmental grant, generally Kentucky or Virginia. This process is called land patenting. Once a part of the commonwealth of Virginia, the land of Kentucky began to be granted after the King's Proclamation of 1763 stating that land would be granted in lieu of cash to the veterans of the French & Indian War. The Land Law of 1779 expanded the granting of land to the state's Revolutionary War veterans. John Filson discussed the land grant process in his 1784 publication.

"The proprietors of the Kentucke lands obtain their patents from Virginia, and their rights are of three kinds, viz. Those which arise from military service, from settlement and pre-emption, or from warrants from the treasury. The military rights are held by officers, or their representatives, as a reward for services done in one of the two last wars. The Settlement and pre-emption rights arise from occupation. Every man who, before March, 1780, had remained in the country one year, or raised a crop of corn, was allowed to have a settlement of four hundred acres, and a pre-emption adjoining it of one thousand acres. Every man who had only built a cabbिन, or made any improvement by himself or others, was entitled to a pre-emption of one thousand acres where such improvement was made.

In March, 1780, the settlement and pre-emption rights ceased, and treasury warrants were afterwards issued, authorizing their possessor to locate the quantity of land mentioned in them, wherever it could be found vacant in Virginia.

The mode of procedure in these affairs may be instructive to the reader. After the entry is made in the land-office, there being one in each county, the person making the entry takes out a copy of the location, and proceeds to survey when he pleases. The plot and certificate of such survey must be returned to the office within three months after the survey is made, there to be recorded; and a copy of the record must be taken out in twelve months, after the return of the survey, and produced to the assistant register of the land-office in Kentucke, where it must lie six months, that prior locators may have time and opportunity to enter a caveat, and prove their better right. If no caveat is entered in that time, the plot and certificate are sent to the land-office at Richmond, in Virginia, and three months more are allowed to have the patent returned to the owner."

Military District in Kentucky

The act of the Virginia General Assembly passed on June 22, 1779, established the Virginia Land Office. This act also provided for military bounty lands for Revolutionary War service. To qualify for bounty land, the individual soldier or sailor had to serve at least three years continuously in the Virginia State Line, Continental Line or Virginia Navy. Militia service did not count.

There were other types of land grants provided within the state of Kentucky. The following chart summarizes the grant series and includes additional information about each series.

The process of obtaining land involved four steps, which must be completed before a land title was granted.

Warrant/Certificate - This step authorized a survey to be made. It is during this documentary process that the individual must prove entitlement. (i.e. military service, occupancy, or other reasons) These warrants could be sold or traded and therefore assigned to another party.

Entry - The surveyor recorded in the entry book the name of the person, the type of warrant, and the date of the intention. This record could be changed or withdrawn by the individual.

Survey/Plat - An actual survey of the property would be made with a recording of the metes and bounds. In addition to a recording in the local Surveyor's Book, a copy was sent along with the certificate to the Land office in Frankfort.

Grant/Patent - This document issued by the Governor's office, after any payment was due, typically contains the name of the owner, survey data, type of warrant, warrant/certificate number, and land description. The original grant was sent to the grantee, a copy was retained in the land office, and the grant may be recorded locally in a deed book.
