Finding Rest - How to Turn to God When the World is Falling Apart. Do you find yourself questioning if God is doing anything in your life? Do you want to learn how to wake up each day and have expectant faith? A deep faith that understands who God is and watches expectantly for Him to do amazing things in your life? Check out this AMAZING post to discover how to live with expectant faith and watch God move in your life! This can shake our faith and cause to question God's love. This post gives scriptural insight from the life of a Bible character to help us make sense of this struggle and be strengthened. Then our faith is strengthened and our hope is enforced. Because if we can have faith in abstract and far-fetched things, then one can sometimes also have false hope " and we can see this. However, for faith to acquire an active character in our life, we need to assign some basis, whether real or invented by us, to that with which we believe we have entered into a relationship; something that can give us an answer, something that can realize our expectations and these plans of ours. But it turns out that one can also have hope in invented things; one can have unjustified hope. If we allow our voices to be quashed before we even speak, then we do a disservice to ourselves and our community. If you find the runes inspire you more than the historical texts, and they help you form a closer connection to the gods, by all means embrace that. Spiritual experiences speak differently to everyone, and each is as personal and valid as the next. Endeavor to discover the deeper lessons using the methods that work best for you, and really work to apply them to daily living. Find your strengths, and work on the weaker areas of learning, until the inner and outer voices reflect confidence. The same applies to those who are finding their strength again after a long spiritual absence, or are reco

Then our faith is strengthened and our hope is enforced. Because if we can have faith in abstract and far-fetched things, then one can sometimes also have false hope – and we can see this. However, for faith to acquire an active character in our life, we need to assign some basis, whether real or invented by us, to that with which we believe we have entered into a relationship; something that can give us an answer, something that can realize our expectations and these plans of ours. But it turns out that one can also have hope in invented things; one can have unjustified hope. International Women's Day aims to give a stage to all of our voices, but being heard and finding the confidence to speak up isn't always easy. Here, we share the words of inspiring women helping us all lead the way. The wisdom she gained and shares is uplifting and inspiring. Here, she speaks exclusively to Psychologies editor Suzy Greaves about fear and healing. In conversation Cheryl Strayed talks with Suzy Greaves. Amy Cuddy: “A confident person” knowing and believing in her identity “carries tools, not weapons”. Body language affects how others see us, but it may also change how we see ourselves. Social psychologist Amy Cuddy argues that 'power posing' can boost feelings of confidence, and might have an impact on our chances for success. Watch the TED Talk here

Whatever you are facing, let our voices unite and tell the devil not today and not tomorrow either. When you are standing at the brink of your breaking through, the warfare may amp up. Keep pressing! We are going to sing the night into the morning, sing the fear into His praise, sing our soul into His Presence. For when we say the name of Jesus, you are letting the devil know, "Not Today!" Broken things become blessed things when you let God do the mending! Walk in Wisdom and Faith! This morning, I am reminded of Saul (who of course later to change his name to Paul) laying in the mud blinded by a light from an encounter he had with Jesus, (Acts 9:3-6). As he neared Damascus on his journey, suddenly a light from heaven flashed around him. Saints Faith, Hope and Charity are a group of Christian martyred saints, venerated together with their mother, Sophia ("Wisdom"). Although earlier editions of the Roman Martyrology commemorated Saints Faith, Hope and Charity on 1 August and their mother Sophia on 30 September, the present text of this official but professedly incomplete catalogue of saints of the Roman Catholic Church has no feast dedicated to the three saints or their mother: the only Sophia included is an early Christian virgin. Then our faith is strengthened and our hope is enforced. Because if we can have faith in abstract and far-fetched things, then one can sometimes also have false hope "and we can see this. However, for faith to acquire an active character in our life, we need to assign some basis, whether real or invented by us, to that with which we believe we have entered into a relationship; something that can give us an answer, something that can realize our expectations and these plans of ours.
