Set in the fictional town of Tourmaline in outback Western Australia, the novel follows the arrival of Michael Random and the impact he has on the community. The town is slowly dying as a result of a combination of drought and the abandonment of its mines. Random preaches the word of God to the town's inhabitants and promises to find water, which stirs the townsfolk to life.

Book Description This universally acclaimed novel--everywhere hailed for its evocative descriptions, its compelling characters, its intricate plot--transports us to Elba, an island off the northwest coast of Italy, in the mid-1950s. It is here that an American man, seduced by the wealth promised in the island's surfeit of semiprecious tourmaline, has traveled with his wife and four young sons, and now struggles to establish a homestead and a fortune. Tourmaline Shell is a member of the legion Leonids, who specializes in hand to hand combat, using martial arts. Personality: He displays a typical hyperactive kind of character. Where he first assume Silver Crow & Lime Bell were on a date before dueling them & what they do after they won in interpreting they hug & kiss. He's pretty lenient to explain how their Legion doesn't have many Girl Burst Linkers because they are a Close-Combat type. He's also pretty close a buddy to Frost Horns.
